Welcome to Sedona!

Sedona, a land of timeless beauty, is surrounded by magnificent, natural Red Rock sculptures and pristine national forests.

Standing about 4,300 feet above sea level, Sedona is centrally located less than two hours north of Phoenix and just two hours south of the Grand Canyon. Perhaps one of the most spectacular secrets of the world, Sedona enchants millions of visitors (and native Arizonans) each year. Erosion has sculpted this panoramic masterpiece for over 350 million years! Ancient Indians believed that Sedona was a sacred land and today their ruins still dot the area. In what is notably referred to as Red Rock Country, the rock formations have been given many affectionate names by the residents such as: Snoopy, Bell Rock, Coffee Pot Rock and Cathedral Rock. Sedona's natural beauty has also attracted movie stars and film producers, like Walt Disney, for decades. Today, Sedona is a major cultural center for the arts in the West and is home for over 40 galleries and dozens of internationally acclaimed artists and writers. Bustling with major cultural events, four-star resorts and restaurants, championship golf courses, exciting adventure tours, several national and state parks, and one-of-a-kind shopping Sedona is certainly a destination of unforgettable experiences!

Any season is a wonderful time to visit Sedona. Each of the four seasons has its own special delights. It is a haven from Phoenix's extreme summer heat, and usually about 20 degrees warmer than Flagstaff in the winter. Sedona's altitude gives it a unique, mild climate all its own. Plan to stay for several days because you won't want to miss all the exciting things to see and do. Sedona's Best hopes to make your stay in Sedona more pleasant by guiding you around town with maps and recommended stops. As you travel through Sedona, you may become mesmerized with a sense of wonder at this gem of nature called Sedona... a treasure perhaps unmatched on this earth! We invite you to enjoy this treasure and share in our respect for this precious land, just as the previous ancient inhabitants did, so generations yet to come may also know the beauty you experience here.

Welcome to the Beauty of Sedona!

3. ART OF CHRISTINE DESPAIN

In her Native American and Fairy Art, DeSpain spent years of going to Indian reservations and Pow Wows to take the precious photographs of children that she paints from, "I loved being there," she said. "I loved the experience. I felt as though I was helping preserve a culture that was quickly fading; however, I always felt as though I was an outsider looking in, painting from my outside in." In her Acrylic Abstract Art, her inspiration comes from dreaming of the natural world. Her newest collection reflects both the living environment and the spiritual world she experiences in the Southwest. DeSpain takes this inspiration one step further in her new collection, using natural forces like wind, air, gravity, fire and the natural flow and grace of Mother Nature to create abstracts of the geography she lives in.

Don't get fooled by imitators. Many oils label the amount of hemp oil but not the number of Cannabinoids, the true measure of potency. We source our hemp oil domestically and press the oil from the full plant, including the flower. We use only the purest, pesticide-free ingredients. Every batch is tested and sent to third-party laboratories to ensure quality and potency. Get the "real deal" "Gone Green CBD" as seen on Shark Tank, HGTV, Discovery, History Channel, Food Network and A & E. Get 10% OFF your first bottle simply by presenting this listing. SEDONA HISTORY

In a far away place in time, ancient winds began to blow rose-colored sand grains into magnificent mesas of crimson. These pinacles have been sculpted by wind and water into monuments of timeless beauty called Sedona. The Hohokam had moved into the area by 700 A.D. Next, the Sinaguan means "without water," or farmers who rely on rain-fall alone) arrived in the Sedona area. They were forced to leave after a violent volcanic eruption in 1066 A.D., which created the Sunset Crater. The residual volcanic ash, however, made the soils very fertile. This attracted the highly civilized Anasazi or "Ancient Ones" to join the returning Sinaguans. The Anasazi taught them to build sophisticated multi-storied pueblos, whose remains still stand today. Crude etchings in the rocks near ancient Indian ruins mark the beginning of Sedona's Art History. Their petroglyphs (etchings) and pictographs (paintings) are relished today as timeless art forms. They can still be viewed in the many Indian ruins that dot the Sedona area.

In the late 1300's, an unexplained occurrence caused these people to leave, almost overnight. Remnants of their corn cobs show they were still roasting in their fires! In 1583, it is believed that Antonio de Espejo was the first white man to travel to Red Rock Country. Pioneers, prospectors and trappers began to arrive in the early 1800s. In 1876 John "Jim" Thompson built his cabin in Oak Creek Canyon and became the first permanent white settler. An escaped convict from California, named C.J. "Bear" Howard, built his hideout cabin at West Fork of Oak Creek. Bear Howard's cabin ironically became the Mayhew Lodge, where years later it was expanded and became a secret refuge of elite movie stars and presidents from around the world!

In 1901 a Pennsylvania Dutch couple, Theodore and Sedona Schnebly, moved to the area and purchased 80 acres. Hoping to get a post office established here, Theodore submitted the name "Schnebly Station." It was rejected because it was too long. His brother, Ellsworth, suggested using his wife's name. In 1902 the town was officially named "Sedona". Author and producer, Zane Grey wrote his famous book "Call of the Canyon". In 1923 Zane Grey convinced producer, Jesse Lasky to film the silent hit movie based on that book in its actual setting. After its success, film crews flocked to Sedona's beautiful Red Rock Country. Since then hundreds of movies have been filmed here. Today, the International Sedona Film Festival has become a world-class venue.

Another major landmark in Sedona's art history was the founding of the Cowboy Artists of America. Joe Beeler, Charlie Dye, John Hampton and Robert MacLeod founded this group on June 23, 1965 at the present day Cowboy Club Restaurant. Its purpose is to authentically perpetuate the memory and culture of the Old West. Sedona's Best invites you to embark on your own journey to discover and celebrate the wonderful, history, art and the beauty of Sedona.

Geological History

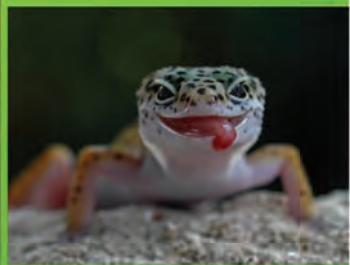

SEDONA'S RED ROCKS

Sedona's famous formations have been slowly created for over 350 million years of time. From oceans to deserts to volcanic eruptions, Sedona's geological events have been quite active, all contributing to the fascinating vistas we see today.

To understand the geological history of the area, imagine the surface of the land to be a gigantic layer cake about 5,000 feet (above sea level) high and about 150,000 square miles in area called the "Colorado Plateau". If we were to cut a slice of this cake, we would see about ten various layers of sedimentary rock signifying different geological events.

As you may notice in the diagram pictured here, the three formations, Schnebly Hill, Hermit and Supai— compose the distinctive, beautiful formations of Sedona. This is due to their unusual susceptibility to erosion. The Supai Formation was named after the Havasupai Indians and is the softer, pale-pink to reddish-brown sandstone. Sedona's exceptional scarlet color comes from the red iron-oxide stains formed when flood plain deposits of iron minerals mixed with available oxygen at that time. Faulting helped the creek waters to break through the lava cap and carve the magnificent canyons. The forces of nature that have contributed to Sedona's colorful canyons and sandstone monoliths are many and today offer a powerful, panorama for all to behold!

Sedona's Nature

Just as rare as Sedona's Beauty is the unusual diversity of plant and wildlife in this area. Due to a tremendous change in altitude of 2,000 feet, there are about eight plant communities from the top rim to the mouth of the canyon: Ponderosa Pine-fir Forests part of the largest in the world, Chaparral, Piñon-Juniper Woodland, Evergreen Oak Woodland, Arizona Cypress Woodland, Upper Riparian, Lower Riparian and Desert-Grassland. Many times, these communities overlap and form new ones called "ecozones."

These varied communities, along with the dependable water supply from Oak Creek and West Fork, house over 300 species of vertebrate animals and over 55 types of mammals. In the remote areas, you may encounter black bear, mountain lions and bobcats. Within the city limits, it's not unusual to see a coyote or even a javelina parade across the street! With 80 types of fish, amphibians, and reptiles you might meet up with harmless lizards known to scoot across the sidewalks in search of shade under a desert plant. The Sedona area boasts over 550 species of seed plants like the prickly pear cactus. It blooms with gorgeous colored flowers. Also, a useful plant (like most desert plants), the prickly pear bears a scrumptious fruit that residents turn into jellies and sauces. The agave or century plant sprouts a 12-foot asparagus-looking stem in just 7 days at the end of 25 years! The ancient Indians roasted this plant in pits. They ate it like we do artichokes and used the other leaves to make needles, thread, baskets, shoes, eating utensils, and more! Appearing at first glance to be barren, the desert and surrounding Sedona plant communities are bursting with beauty, fascinating wildlife and are alive with plants offering hundreds of uses from shampoos to food for man's survival and comfort. If you'd like to explore Sedona's various canyons and wildlife, check with the Forest Service or see our hiking section for further information.
